WASHINGTON

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, AUGUST 26.

The National Intelligencer and Cuba. We have read with care and attention the leading editorial in the National Intelligencer of this morning. We have ever regarded that journal as the most able, intelligent, and dignified in the United States, and have entertained towards its conductors sentiments of the highest prominent characteristics. So eminently conservative is it that we have never been able to discover, in the past thirty years, the first instance in which its approval has given encouragement to a popular or republican movement. "Legitimacy" appears to be its idol; the institutions all its confidence; and the usages that obstruct the progress of freedom are deemed by it the only bulwarks of safety and justice.

In the article we have this morning read, we are forcibly reminded of all the wrong and injustice that have been perpetrated by our Government and people in violating the law of the decalogue which says, "Thou shalt not steal;" we are informed with what sincerity and earnestness that journal has endeavored to guard our country from the late mishap; we are assured that Cuba "is as much and as undisputed a territory of Spain as Long Island is of New York;" we are told how censurable they are who seduced our young men into the snare that was laid for them; we are told that "a great prize" was the object of these men, who were 'familiarized with blood and carnage-composing altogether a body of men of ardent courage and 'heroic violence;'" we are told that the editors deplore the event, but that they foresaw and deprecated it; but we read not a word in condemnation of the Spanish butchers, who inflicted a cruel and fearful death upon their captives, in a manner and under circumstances most horrible and disgraceful. Not one syllable is uttered in censure of them. Not one allusion is made to the base, cowardly, and wanton sacrifice of life, nor of the fiendlike and hellish spirit exhibited by the monsters towards whom the Intelligencer is so magnanimous and tender-hearted.

From the North American we quote in another column a review of the circumstances of the capture and execution of the fifty prisoners. The editor of that journal speaks forth as a man and an American, and truthfully describes the deed that now appeals to every American breast for retribution. He asks not if these men were clearly in the right; but he remembers the sentiments of the age, the usage of our country, the mercy ever shown by our army to Mexico, whether in arms or conquered, the protection given to the bloody Santa Anna while the fields of Texas yet smoked with the blood of his captives-these things are remevabered, as the merciless deeds arise to view; and condemnation deep and burning is breathed forth, and will be echoed in every patriot heart. But the Intelligencer declares that there is, in its opinion, "no consideration of policy which should induce the United States to accept the Island of Cuba, with its present popula tion, as a free gift, with the consent of all the nations of the earth to the act." We can take no exception to this opinion, provided we are not required to adopt it. As the opinion of those whose faith in the salutary tendencies of republican progress is not ardent, it is all very well. But for ourselves, we think the Island of Cuba, governed and controled by the arbitrary martial power of the Queen of Spain, is not held by her by as sacred a title as Long Island is by the republican State to which it voluntarily clings, and in whose councils it is represented: and we think moreover that, no matter what its population, any region of country that ducements to the United States to accept it. But we never before heard indifference expressed by an American to this acquisition. We have always heard the desire expressed that it might be ours. We have heard this from the lips of men of all parties and of all pursuits. Its position to control the Gulf of Mexico, its agricultural capacity, its capability of sustaining such augmented population as would incline to its from the States, its desirableness as a resort for our people, the advantages of free trade between its ports and those of the States-these things, united with the jealous feelings that will ever exist in this country while it is held by a foreign power, will always keep alive a desire for it possession. That they furnish good reasons why we should "steal" it, we do not contend; but that they furnish collateral motives to such as would aid the people of Cuba in liberating themselves, is reasonable and just. We are not yet assured that this purpose does not prevail among the Cubans, and all admit that the recent incursion was prompted by a belief in its existence.

Who now is President!

Presidency, William R. King, of Alabama, was bark, William Chase, landing her valuable cargo elected President of the U. S. Senate. He is of sugar, which will be sold at auction on Fritherefore the Vice President of the United day next. States, and as such is, in the event of the "removal of the President from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the round trip from Georgetown to Cumberland powers and duties of the said office," required to and back in nine and a half days, the quickest assume them. But throughout the whole of the trip ever made on the canal by a freight boat. present summer, and at this very moment, when mentous agitation, Mr. King is absent from the from boats. seat of Government, unprepared to enter upon the duties devolving upon him, and perhaps ignorant of the imperative demands occasioned by the exigencies and necessities of the country.

When Mr. King was chosen by the Senate we were not only gratified, but delighted. We held him in the highest esteem; and it gave us lively pleasure to know that the presiding office of that august body had been conferred upon so worthy and estimable a gentleman, and so true a patriot. Our chagrine now is therefore the greater-now that we find him derelict to duty in the hour of greatest need. The acts of a portion of our citizens have tended to produce discord between us and another nation, on the one hand, while, on the other, the conduct of that nation has been such as at once to offered a direct and unequivocal insult to our na- Smith, and Morning Star.

tional flag upon the high seas. Yet, under these our capital is without its legal and responsible executive officer, the greater portion of the cabinet ministers are absent, and the legal alternate of the President is afar off, reposing as securely and indifferently as though no accountability rested upon him for the administration of public affairs. Since the foundation of our Government such a precedent may elsewhere be sought in vain; nor, we trust, will it ever be imitated in all future time. Our Government is not an idle form, an unmeaning respect. Yet we cannot be blind to its most symbol. Annexed to every office under it are duties and responsibilities that may not be disregarded with impunity. A gilded truncheon is not placed in an imbecile hand, and the power of the Government entrusted to one behind the throne. Let Mr. King remember these things, and let him hereafter hold himself ready that uphold aristocracies and kingdoms retain to answer to his countrymen for the gross and flagrant dereliction of which he now stands guilty in their eyes.

In its editorial on Cuban affairs this morning, the Intelligencer well remarks that "if any of the officers of the Government have been found betraying their trust by connivance, by intentional absence from their posts, or by shrinking from the performance of their duties, the public welfare requires that their places be forthwith supplied by men of firmness, fearlessness, and a proper sense of duty." Where and how this declaration was designed to be most potentially felt we do not pretend to conjecture. The editors of that journal well know when to make direct thrusts and when backhand blows. But we choose to apply it to Mr. King, on whom the administration now constitutionally devolves; and if he is not amenable to the censure expressed, it will be his duty to come to Washington forthwith and establish his innocence. The people of this country may not be trifled with. They have a just appreciation of what is due from every public servant, and they will urge their demands to the uttermost.

The " Union" of this morning says: "Charles Eames, esq., late editor of the Nashville Union, is now associated in the editorial department of this journal, and has entered upon his duties. Mr. Eames is well known as a writer to the readers of the Union under its previous management, and his accession to its editorial force at this time will lessen the labors of the principal editor, and entitle the public to look, with increased confidence, for the successful and satisfactory conduct of the paper."

REPORTED CAPTURE OF LOPEZ .- The Boston Bee of yesterday morning contains an item we have not elsewhere seen. It says that "a wellinformed Spanish gentleman, in intimate intercourse with the Minister of Spain in this country, states that a despatch addressed to the Minister, Don Calderon de la Barca, was put on board the Cherokee at the moment of her departure from Hayana, announcing the capture of Gen. Lopez by the government troops. The Minister, who was in New York, sent the Secretary of Legation with the intelligence to Spain by the steamer Humboldt, which sailed Saturday."

The Baltimore correspondent of the National Intelligencer says, in his letter of yesterday's date: "I was conversing this morning with an intelligent gentleman, well versed in the affairs of Cuba and the condition of the citizens. He looks upon the movements of Lopez as preposterous, and the next thing to madness. However disaffected the Creoles may be, he is insecure a party." It is therefore not perfectly its white-washers, needs attention. clear that the Creoles are in no wise disaffected, and that their not joining Lopez will be in proof of this fact.

EDITORS' CORRESPONDENCE:

Galphinism, Gardinerism, etc To the Editors of the American Tele GENTLEMEN: I have read the remarks of tw of your correspondents, "Patria, non Pars" and "A Democrat," relative to my strictures upon the official conduct of the President, his Cabinet Ministers, and some of the heads of bureaux.

I can afford to pay a passing notice to each of those correspondents; but they must not expect, by endeavoring to engage me in controversy, to deter me from my purpose of exposing the shortcomings of this Administration toward the party which exalted it to power. Patria, non Pars" mistakes my position when he represents me as blackening the fame of the proudest and most honored members of the Administration. I merely chronicle their official acts, and contrast those acts with the Whig professions of their authors. If this process casts a blackening shade upon their fame, I can't help it. I give facts; if they are of a blackening nature, let those who are to blame in the matter be saddled with the responsibility and the censure which must inevitably follow— and they will be.

"Patria, non Pars" mistakes me again when he says my highest appreciation of the country's interest is, that unless the places, and especially the emoluments of office, shall fall to me and my friends, all is corrupt, all is unsafe! I have said nothing like this, nor have I meant any thing of the kind. I hold no office-am no applicant for an appointment—and have no rela-tive in office. I feel that I have a right, as one who helped to bring about the election of Taylor and Fillmore and the exaltation of the present Administration to power, to ask "the powers that be" to do their duty to the party that made them what they are. This is all I have asked. The men in power, put there because they were Whigs, have no right to assume that all the offices of value in the Government are theirs, to be disposed of to their kin, without regard to fitness, to their Democratic friends, and to such other persons as they may choose to confer ap-pointments upon. A political Administration, prought into power by the efforts of its party, after a hard struggle, that will not take care of its friends, who are capable and honest, but seeks to conciliate its enemies, deserves to go down, ought to go down, and, as certain as fate, will go down. "Patria, non Pars" errs greatly, if he is in earnest when he says that, in regard to the Gardiner Claim, I grope for facts in the dark, arrive at conclusions in the dark, stab in the dark, &c.; and that I will have to take back my accusations, and unsay all my assertions on the subject. My assertions have all been made in the broad light of noonday. I have not even told the half that could be told on the subject of the Gardiner and Mears' claims; and as to the taking back and unsaying what I have asserted, I have only to remark that "we shall see what we shall see." But really "Patria, non Pars" must be joking. If he is not, I challenge him to say, in so many words, whether he believes the Gardiner Claim and the Mears Claim are free from fraud or forgery, and that they will yet turn out to be, one or both, just

As to the defence and white-washing of Mr. Corwin and his chief clerk, which both "Patria, non Pars" and "A Democrat" indulge in, I have nothing to say, further than this: these correspondents no doubt have a friendly feeling for the two functionaries in question, and, not being very great Whigs themselves, cannot see why it is not all perfectly right that Mr. Corwin should promote Mr. Walker's faithful man to the chief clerkship of the Treasury Department, and not only retain nearly all of Mr. Walker's old and well-tried Democratic subor dinates in the department, but pick up Demo crats from the gutter and appoint them to office Why should not "A Democrat" laud his friend Corwin for such a line of conduct, particularly if "A Democrat" is anxious to obtain an ap-pointment from this Whig Administration? But enough in reply to the two correspondpersuaded they will not go over to so small and ents in question. The Administration, and not

> What better is this Administration than the Galphin one which preceded it? Is it not part and parcel of that Administration? What Whig in office, under the Galphins, dared to expres an opinion against the allowance of the Galphin Claim? If he expressed such an opinion, was one of the most zealous defenders of the phin claim in Congress, to the office of Secretary of War, and either President Fillmore or Corwin appointed Allen A. Hall (who left the office of Assistant Secretary of the Treasury to edit the Galphin organ and defend the Galphin swindle, when better editors and truer Whigs refused to do the dirty work) to the post of Superintendent of the Custom House and Marine Hospital at San Francisco. And has not Mr. Corwin called upon the same noted letter-writer that eulogised the Galplin Claim, and played sycophant and toady to the Galphin Cabinet, to defend his conduct in the matter of circular, which was published in four or five papers in northern cities simultaneously?

> Did not President Taylor and Mr. Secretary Crawford leave it with a Democratic Congress to investigate and pronounce against the Gal phin Claim? And are not President Fillmore and Mr. Secretary Corwin leaving it with a Democratic Congress to investigate the Gardi ner Claim? Is President Fillmore asleep on this subject Has he no regard for the reputation of the Whig party? Does he not know of the Galphin spot upon its escutcheon? And is he willing to let a Democratic Congress fix a Gardiner spot also upon it? It is rumored that, either at the President's request, or otherwise, Mr. Corwin has not signed any requisitions as Secretary of the Treasury, since his return from Ohio, subject of the Gardiner Claim. The result is, J. Carlos Gardiner has been despatched to Mexico to see what can be done there to make the Gardiner Claim appear well. And what has the President done? Why he has allowed the matter to be turned over to our come, and who, when he gets there, will have his hands full of other matters of grave import. A special commissioner, of high character and unimpeachable honesty, should be at once apabout the Gardiner Claim, the Mears Claim, and the Hargous Claim; and if any body has been guilty, let the guilty alone suffer. This is the way for the President to seek a popularity with the people which would be lasting and durable. But no; he leaves the Government in the hands of Messrs. Graham and Hall, and goes hunting after popularity in Virginia, where he will never find enough to do him any good.

COMMENTATOR. WASHINGTON, August 26, 1851

To the Editors of the American Telegraph.

GENTLEMEN: The heart-rending, bloody intel ligence from the Island of Cuba you have give. 1 to the public, and I will add the news as usual appeared in the spicy and enterprising little T. Tegragh, in advance of the big sheets of the city, (big with lethargic dignity.)
But the object of addressing you this note is, (big with lethargic dignity.

inquire of you who is the humans. cheatric, and whole-souled American, who graces and adorns the post of United States Consul at the city of Havana? Many of your readers are anxious for information in relation to this Government worthy. If he has not distinguished himself, he has at least become notorious. He has established for himself a character which the writer never supposed any American ever wished to attain. He can "look upon blood and carnage with composure." He can witness the slaughter of his heroic but misguided countrymen, by the cowardly Spaniards, with equanmen, by the cowardly Spaniards, with equanimity, if not with delight. There are some who think this an unenviable attainment, but the representative of the interests of the United States in the "gem of the Antilles," it would seem, prides himself upon the possession of the rare quality. Will you gentlemen let your rare quality. Will you, gentlemen, let your numerous patrons know who is the Consul of the United States at Havana? What is his name? From what State of the Union was he appointed? Who exerted their influence to pro-cure his appointment? It is also desirable to know what were the peculiar merits of the gen-tleman? Was he distinguished for talents learning, benevolence of heart, and enthusiastic zeal, and large sacrifices in the Whig cause? Was he ever known to serve or benefit a member of the human family? The answer to these questions will interest the public at this time and from my knowledge of your candor and accustomed courtesy, I have no doubt that Mr. Corwin, Mr. Harrington, Commen-tator, &c.

To the Editors of the American Telegraph. GENTLEMEN: As a constant reader of the Telegraph I have seen the occasional assaults of your correspondents on Mr. Corwin, the Secretary of the Treasury. I have also seen similar assaults from other quarters. Being a mere 'looker-on" in politics, and taking no part except where great principles are involved, I con-fess I have been somewhat surprised at the attacks above alluded to; and I feel bound to say that, in all my intercourse in this community, I have never yet heard a single individual express a belief in the truth of the charges made against Mr. Corwin, in relation to the Florida or Mexican claims. This fact is conclusive evidence, to my mind, that such charges are utterly without foundation, and must be attributed to some misapprehension on the part of those who make them.

In regard to Mr. Corwin's treatment of the clerks in his Department, I know nothing; but, if he has treated with proper consideration any Democrats in office under him, it is only follow ing Mr. Walker's example in his treatment of the Whig clerks under him. Mr. Walker had nothing proscriptive about him. He has too much of the milk of human kindness in him to do injustice to anybody; and I am glad to learn from one of your correspondents, that Mr. Corwin has exhibited similar good qualities. But it seems to be a matter of complaint against Mr. Corwin, that he has promoted to the "chief elerkship of the Treasury Department" one who was "true and faithful to Mr. Walker," so much so, that he allowed him an extra compensation for extra services. The gentleman alluded to, I suppose, is Mr. George Harrington.

"Commentator" does not state whether Mr. Harrington is a Whig or a Democrat, and I shall not stop to inquire. If he served Mr. Walker so faithfully, as did also certain Democrats spoken of, Mr. Corwin had reason to infer not only their ability to discharge any duty imposed on them, but also their fidelity to him as well as to Mr. Walker. I know Mr. Harrington as a public officer and not as a partizan-and I am bound to say, that I know of no one more prompt, more efficient, more capaole, and more ready to discharge every duty appertaining to the office he holds than Mr. Harrington; and Mr. Corwin, or any other Secretary of the Treasury, would feel the loss most severely, if he should determine to dispense with the services of such a man.

As a Democrat, I admire the character of Mr. Walker, and approve of his anti-proscriptive spirit. But still, on the great principle of revenue and incidental protection to our domestic industry, I like Mr. Corwin's doctrines better than the free-trade notions of Mr. Walker. Without regard to party-predilections, therefore, I approve of what I deem correct principles wherever I find them. On this ground, too, I approve of President Fillmore's Administrabecause he has shown his determination to maintain the compromises of the Constitution, to faithfully execute the laws, and to do all in his power to hand down to posterity the Union of the States, as we received it from our Revolutionary fathers. I do not, therefore, admire such attacks upon any member of an Administration, which is thus engaged in discharging its duty to the country, and more especially when a principal ground of complaint is the keeping in or the turning out of capable and faithful clerks from office. A DEMOCRAT.

Who is Acting President?

To the Editors of the American Telegraph.

MESSES. EDITORS: It is the current rumor that Admiral Easby, in the absence of the President and his Private Secretary, the other day, repaired to the Presidential Mansion, and very kindly opened the President's mail, to see what important news he might find there to transmit to His Excellency at the White Sulphur Springs; and that he then wrote to the President what he had done, and gave him the benefit of his researches.

If this rumor is untrue, I doubt not your has been deeply engaged, at his residence, with General Waddy Thompson, and others, on the set him right in the premises.
